I am an internist who trained at Weiss Memorial Hospital, and I have practiced there since 1993. I have enjoyed my work at Weiss because of the way we serve our patients. There is no discrimination, only the best possible care – no matter if the person is a homeless individual who came to us from the street or a more affluent patient. We see a diverse array of nationalities, all living in Chicago, all in need of our expertise and compassion. And we deliver that at Weiss.

In my tenure we have had four different owners of this hospital. No matter who the owner is – no matter if COVID tests our strength for two years – no matter what, we keep our focus on patient care. That is why we are here.

With a new owner based in our local area, we may see even greater agility as we respond to challenges and opportunities. I welcome the change of ownership and look forward to many more opportunities to serve the community around us.
